

CONTENTS

Introduction	v
Johann Caspar Kerll: Eight Toccatas
Toccata prima	1
Toccata seconda	7
Toccata terza	13
Toccata quarta	21
Cromatica con durezza, e ligature
Toccata quinta	25
Toccata sesta	31
per il pedale
Toccata settima	36
Toccata ottava	41

INTRODUCTION

Johann Caspar Kerll: Eight Toccatas

Born 9 April 1627 in the Saxon village of Adorf, Johann Caspar Kerll probably received his earliest musical instruction from his father, organist Caspar Kerll. While still in his teens, Kerll found a powerful benefactor in Archduke Leopold Wilhelm of Austria, who sponsored Kerll's study in Vienna in the 1640s with Giovanni Valentini, then imperial Kapellmeister. After Archduke Leopold Wilhelm became regent of the Netherlands in 1647, Kerll went to Brussels, where he served as Leopold Wilhelm's court organist. The archduke was anxious to obtain the services of the renowned Giacomo Carissimi, but when the Italian master declined to be lured to Leopold Wilhelm's court, Kerll was sent to Rome to study with him; presumably, Leopold Wilhelm hoped in this way to imbue the music of his Brussels court with some of the elements of Carissimi's style. Kerll returned to Brussels in 1652. When Leopold Wilhelm disbanded his court in 1656, Kerll became Vice Kapellmeister at the court of the Bavarian elector Ferdinand Maria in Munich; upon the death of Kapellmeister Giovanni Giacomo Porro later in the same year, Kerll was named Kapellmeister. This position entailed responsibility for the numerous performances of church, theater, and chamber music at the elector's court. Kerll himself composed many of the works performed at court, and it has been said that under his direction Hofkapelle performances achieved once again the excellence they had enjoyed under Lassus during the previous century. Kerll's most illustrious pupil during his years in Munich was the young Agostino Steffani.

In 1673 Kerll abruptly left his post in Munich and moved to Vienna, apparently with no immediate prospect of employment. The reason for Kerll's resignation appears to have been a quarrel with certain of the court's Italian singers, who reportedly were unable to perform a work in which Kerll had introduced unusual intervals and other audacities. On 1 January 1675, Emperor Leopold I, who had ennobled Kerll in 1664, granted him a pension; in March 1677, Leopold took Kerll into his service as one of his court organists. Kerll's colleagues in this office included his friend Alessandro Poglietti. During the great plague that ravaged Vienna in 1679, Kerll composed the organ versets that he was later to publish under the title Modulatio organica. In 1683, following the Turkish siege of Vienna, Kerll returned to Munich. Despite having left Vienna, Kerll retained the position of imperial court organist until the end of 1692.

In 1685, the Bavarian elector Max Emanuel, who had succeeded Ferdinand Maria upon the latter's death in 1679, married the Austrian archduchess Maria Antonia. Kerll marked this union between the houses of Bavaria and Austria—and his relationship to both—with the publication of his Modulatio organica (Munich, 1686), offered as a wedding present to Maria Antonia. Kerll's activities in the final years of his life remain obscure. His last pupil was Franz Xaver Murschhauser (1663–1738). Kerll died on 13 February 1693 in Munich and was buried in the crypt of the Augustinian monastery there. A commemorative tablet, which disappeared during the nineteenth century, bore the following verses:

Musices erat iste decus,
trahit velut Orpheus
Alter Caesareas Aquilas,
Bauarosque leones.
Austria dum quoque
alaudas laudat eiusque
Modos musicos
Europa requirit.

He was music's glory,
considered a second Orpheus
to the imperial eagles
and Bavarian lions.
While Austria also
praises his larks,
Europe continues to seek his musical measures.

During his earlier years in Munich (1656–73), Kerll was concerned mainly with the composition of operas and church music, and he continued to compose Masses through the subsequent years spent in Vienna.

1. Toccata prima

A-GÖ, fols. 49^r - 50^v

A musical score for the song 'The Rose Tree'. It features a treble and bass staff. The treble staff begins with a treble clef, a common time signature (C), and a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The melody starts on a whole note chord (F4, A4, C5) and continues with a series of eighth notes: G4, F4, E4, D4, C4, B3, A3, G3, F3, E3, D3, C3. The bass staff begins with a bass clef, a common time signature (C), and a key signature of one flat (B-flat). It starts with a whole note chord (F3, A2, C3) and continues with a series of eighth notes: G2, F2, E2, D2, C2, B1, A1, G1, F1, E1, D1, C1. The score is divided into two measures by a double bar line. The first measure contains the initial melody and bass line. The second measure contains a continuation of the melody and bass line, with a final whole note chord (F4, A4, C5) in the treble staff and a final whole note chord (F3, A2, C3) in the bass staff.

3

Example 10-10

5

This image shows measures 5 and 6 of the musical score. Measure 5 features a treble staff with a melody of eighth and sixteenth notes, a bass staff with a single note, and a grand staff with a complex sixteenth-note pattern. Measure 6 continues the melody in the treble staff, has a whole note in the bass staff, and a grand staff with a descending sixteenth-note scale. A key signature change to one flat is indicated at the end of measure 6.

7